When I started to do research to find an expert for my drowning case of a 17 year old boy who jumped off a bridge at a city park into a lake with some friends, I wanted an expert who could work with me to convince the city that any settlement must include preventative measures at the park so future drownings could be prevented. I found Dr. Fletemeyer who had vast experience in water safety as a former rescue recovery diver and currently a professor and lecturer. Dr. Fletemeyer was able to work with me to get the city to agree to include in our settlement, training of the local police in water safety and equipping them with assets necessary and bringing awareness to the community with programs of water safety. Additionally the city agreed to put equipment on the bridge to help save anyone who might try to jump into the water. Dr. Fletemeyer suggested things the city's expert did not think of, and they were quite impressed with him. I highly recommend Dr. Fletemeyer as a water safety expert.

Sincerely,

Richard V. Gray
